Pilot of the first bomber was Capt. James H. DeWolf, Kelly, Neb. When he first sighted the Japanese carrier, he was ordered to fly in a protective escort. Because of low clouds, he sometimes had to fly at an altitude of only 500 feet. A group of seven zero fighters accompanied him.

MCNAIR DENIES TROOPS 'GREEN'

WASHINGTON, May 15 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Lesley P. McNair, commander of the army ground force, said today that the American boys who fought in the North African campaign had a right to feel indignant when they were called green troops.

Appearing fully recovered from the wounds he received in Tunisia, McNair told a press conference that the first division, with nearly three years of training behind it, was composed of the best U. S. troops sent into Africa.

"They can't call these men green troops by any stretch of the imagination," McNair said. "Of course, there is no substitute for actual battle experience which I have never been able to discover."

"When Maj. Gen. (Alexander) Patch was in my office shortly after he came back from Guadalcanal, he said that the first 20 minutes of a man's battle must be more to him than any other phase of his training. It either made a fighter of the man or proved he would never be one."

In a critique of his own training program, McNair said that his trip to North Africa had led him to believe that the one flaw in the training of U. S. troops is that some of the men seem to have their training pounded into them a little harder than it was.

"This was particularly true, he said, in the handling of mines, which were used so profusely in North Africa that they constitute a new branch of the service."

GOODING HUNTING WORKERS' CAMP

Gooding county is looking for a place to house the 50 Mexican or Jamaican farm workers scheduled to arrive within the next couple of weeks. It was said last night by Roy C. Lane, manager of the Twin Falls Bureau of agricultural administration. Lane

Lane said plans to make a government hospital of the unused tuberculosis hospital and the one building on the campus of the old Gooding college which the FSA was using gave the FSA assurance of being able to use the building only a mat-

● There's always a way to get the farm work done but farmer

John Kirsch of Carlton, Ore., does it the hard way. He starts one tractor down the field, sets the controls and then jumps off, runs over to a second, starts it, rides it 'till the first one is about at the end of the row, jumps off the second, catches the first, turns it around, starts it out in the new row, picks up the second, turns it

CANNING BY LDS GIVEN APPROVAL

SALT LAKE CITY, May 15 (AP)—Batterman and the Mormon church came to an understanding today when the office of price administration took a tolerant view of a "community-canning" plan advocated by the latter-day Saints.

The understanding came about after a conference of Utah OPA officials and high church officials, including Harold L. Lee of the L. D. S. (Mormon) council of the 12 and managing director of the church welfare plan, and Robert L. Judd, church legal adviser.

Although full leaders in every Mormon basement still will not be encouraged by OPA, community canning will be permitted, which is all the Utah people hoped for.

Community Enterprise Treated

For years the Mormon church had urged community enterprises, but when the war began ration points came along it looked as if the wholesale home canning plan was going to come to a stop. But, as it turned out, the federal government is urging more and more cooperative enterprises and the Mormons are right in style.

The OPA endorsed full utilization of L. D. S. church-owned canning facilities in giving canning projects a stamp of approval, explaining that to ration points will be collected from bonafide community groups who provide their own produce and do their own work. Sugar will be made available for their use.

Of this, of course, is outside of the church welfare program, itself.

The 28 plants in the intermountain region will be made available to community groups. Facilities include buildings with scalders, work tables, and cooking stoves.

To Provide Own Produce

Each group will provide its own produce, will pay a flat fee for the use of the plant, and will assume expenses of upkeep, light, fuel and labor. A supervisor will assure proper use of equipment but will not participate in actual processing.

H. Grant Ivins, Utah OPA administrative director, said: "This program is entirely in line with the spirit as well as the letter of the OPA home canning regulations. It is the desire of our government war agencies to encourage maximum preservation of food. Since the large, commercial canning facilities will be in operation at the same time, we realize that the principal way to increase our national production is through maximum use of home and semi-commercial canning facilities such as those owned by the L. D. S. church."

Each member takes home his share of the canned goods, without surrendering ration point values.
